INSTRUCTIONS

Provide information disclosing your invention in the following order: (a) a statement of the general purposes and objects of the invention; (b) advantages of the invention over known prior inventions of like character; (c) a complete and detailed description of the construction and operation of the invention, with illustrations when necessary; and (d) a summary of the novel features in the order of their importance, each feature briefly and separately described in consecutively numbered paragraphs. If more space is required than is provided to adequately describe the invention, continue on plain white paper, using one side of the paper only, and securely attach to this form. Other attachments to this form should include drawings, sketches, photos, and other illustrations forming a part of this disclosure which cannot be described in the space provided.

When drawings, sketches, photos, and other illustrations are included as attachments in conjunction with the written description, each attachment will be identified as follows: "Attachment A, Attachment B, etc." The various elements of the invention shown on each attachment should be identified by numbers, such as 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. Both the attachments and the referenced elements on the attachments will be referred to and identified in the written description by the reference characters.

This form and all attachments should be submitted in duplicate together with duplicate copies of Form DOT F 2000.2, Record of Invention, and Form DOT F 2000.3. Both sets of the form and each attachment thereto submitted to the Office of the Patent Counsel will be signed and dated by each inventor and by one or more witnesses who have read and understand the disclosure of the invention set forth herein.
